

- (1) What would you'd share about the Pribilof Ecosystem and community with folk in Anchorage (500 words max) in a blog for the Seabird Youth Network website. The top three blogs will be posted on the website.

St. Paul island is the home of a population of Northern fur seals. Aleut people harvest the Northern fur seals to eat them. Fewer seals are coming back to breed every year. Although, we eat seals, because they taste good, we are not the only reason the population of seals are going down.

The flowers are numerous they cover up most of the tundra in the summer. They are pretty in the summer to, The flowers smell good during the summer. One is poisonous, Monk's hood. Ancient Aleuts used monk's hood and rub it on spears and hit whales fins with it it killed the whales after a few days.

Taughney leads a group of students to Aleut dance in the gym. It is fun because it passes on traditions from generation to generation.

- (1) What would you'd share about the Pribilof Ecosystem and community with folk in Anchorage (500 words max) in a blog for the Seabird Youth Network website. The top three blogs will be posted on the website.

Aquilina Aleut dances with the Adults.
Some of Aleut dances are called, catching Chugix, cheering up a friend, Hide and go seek game, Atgan Akun. These Aleut dances help pass on tradition.
